RESEARCH

My dissertation analyzes a network of observatories built by the Maharaja of Jaipur, Sawai Jai Singh II, between 1721 and 1743. Constructed in five northern cities (Jaipur, Delhi, Mathura, Varanasi, and Ujjain), the observatories stand at the conjunction of Vedic, Islamic and European science as interpreted and implemented under the patronage of the Maharaja. My dissertation will demonstrate the ways in which Jai Singh's network of observatories both concretized and historicized landscapes of science as part of a system of control over knowledge, time and space during the second quarter of the eighteenth century.
